

Off campus

Deakin's off-campus students are supported by our dedicated teaching staff, through our award-winning library services, which are among the best in the world; and interactive study methods including:

- » online conferencing for peer support and group and individual communication between our staff members and students. Online conferencing is an increasingly important part of our teaching and learning environment.
- » tutorial and tele-tutorial groups can be formed between you and a University-appointed tutor.
- » weekend classes are conducted in some courses to enable you to meet our academic staff members and your fellow students.

Deakin uses online technologies to enrich learning experiences and add flexibility and value for all students. Deakin's online services provide off-campus students with additional access to online resources and services and opportunities for interaction.

Deakin supports off-campus students by adapting its comprehensive range of services and activities to their circumstances. These begin with an orientation program for new students and extend to all areas of administrative and academic support.

Specialist off-campus career advisers and language and learning advisers can help students with course direction and the development of successful study skills and techniques.

For more information on the orientation program, please visit www.deakin.edu.au/transition.

Deakin is one of only four Australian universities to receive international accreditation from the Distance Education and Training Council (DETC). Deakin's off-campus coursework courses, up to and including masters level, are externally accredited by the Accrediting Commission of the US DETC.

DID YOU KNOW?

All undergraduate students can study off campus from their first year. As an off-campus student you can study when, where and how you like, and fit your study in with your work and personal commitments. You will study the same course with the same lecturers as on-campus students and have access to a range of study and support services.
