Study Deakin's Bachelor of Arts/Master of International Relations and learn how to challenge perceptions, test theories and pose solutions to the relationships between countries throughout the world.

Course essentials

Deakin code: D305

Location: Burwood (Melbourne), Online

Duration: 4.5 years full-time or part-time equivalent

Intake: T1 (March), T2 (July)

Course overview

Gain a comprehensive understanding of the political forces that shape the world, and graduate with two degrees that prepare you for a global career.

Set yourself up to understand global forces by majoring in International Relations (IR) as part of your arts degree and enhance your career options by choosing a complementary major or elective from more than 30 disciplines on offer. Then, explore global governance, IR theory, international politics and security and strategy in the masters component of your dual degree.

You can also opt to boost your employability and broaden your horizons through overseas opportunities, depending on travel restrictions.

Working alongside leaders from diverse cultures will allow you to see international relations from a unique perspective —an important skill for both your career and your life.

Specialisations

When completing your masters degree, you will choose a specialisation within IR and complete a research project that challenges you to put your newly-gained skills and knowledge into practice. Your specialisation means you'll have the opportunity to acquire advanced knowledge in the IR area you're most interested in. You could choose to specialise in:

- conflict and security
- diplomacy and activism
- human rights and international law.

Career opportunities

The Bachelor of Arts/Master of International Relations could lead to a range of careers and professions for those looking to expand their career options internationally.

You may find employment across a range of organisations including in consulting agencies, defence forces, education, foreign affair departments, immigration departments, the media, multicultural associates, NGOs, in private sector corporations and in research.

'From working with Victoria's local multicultural community, to living in Washington D.C. for three months and interning in President Obama's former Senate seat, I was able to gain a wide range of real-world experience before graduating. I was also able to complete my studies in record time thanks to Deakin's trimester system.'
